Research Statement

My research sits at the intersection of international relations and political theory, focusing on broad questions of borders, sovereignty and security. My book, The Politics of Borders: Sovereignty, Security and the Citizen after 9/11 (Cambridge University Press, 2017), examines the evolution of border security in response to the linked challenges of terrorism and immigration. It treats globalization-era themes such as sovereignty, migration and global justice, as well as securitization-era ones such as identity-management, risk-assessment, and the rise of Big Data. This research builds upon my doctoral work, which won the 2016 Leo Strauss Award for the best dissertation in the field of Political Philosophy, granted by the American Political Science Association (APSA). Other fields of interest include theories of identity and nationalism, critical theory, the history of political thought and the philosophy of social science.
